Cybersecurity in U.S. Critical Infrastructure Report

This report is the result of a research study based on an online CyberRisk Alliance survey of InfraGard members, conducted from July through September 2021.

In all, 380 respondents from the financial services, healthcare, manufacturing, and chemical sectors responded to questions about their ability to identify and protect against malware and ransomware attacks, to detect and respond to such attacks, and, ultimately, their ability to recover. The survey included specific questions mapped to the five NIST areas (Identify, Protect, Detect, Respond, and Recover). Their responses provided the basis for the Critical Infrastructure Resilience and Readiness (CIRR) benchmark scores covered in this report.
